

MORPHOLOGY & SPELLING

Middle School | Unit 6

Suffix -ure

Today I am learning that the suffix -ure often forms a noun naming an action, process, result, or state.

1 Learn the Meaning

The suffix -ure commonly forms nouns. These words often name an action, process, result, or state connected to a base or related word.

failure

result of failing

closure

act/result of closing

exposure

state of being exposed

departure

act of leaving

2 Build the Word

Use the base or related word to build a noun ending in -ure. Some words change spelling as the suffix is added.

Base / related	Suffix	New word	What it names
fail	-ure
close	-ure
expose	-ure
depart	-ure
press	-ure

3 Read and Notice

Read the passage below.

Our science group investigated how materials change under different conditions. The first test ended in failure because the container was not sealed properly, so the team made a careful closure before trying again. In another test, controlled exposure to light changed the colour of a sample. The class also measured air pressure and compared the results before and after heating the container. Later, the teacher demonstrated a mixture of sand and water and asked students to describe its texture. At the end of the session, our departure was delayed while everyone checked that the equipment had been stored safely. Mia noticed that several nouns ended in -ure. Some were easy to connect to a base or related word: fail + ure = failure, depart + ure = departure, and press + ure = pressure. Others showed a spelling change, such as close + ure = closure and expose + ure = exposure. She used the word parts to help explain both meaning and spelling.

Highlight the -ure words. Underline the base or related word when you can identify one.
