Today I am learning that the prefix mid- often means middle or halfway.

The prefix mid- often tells us that something is in the middle of a time, place or position.

3 Read and Notice

Read the passage below.

By midweek, Leo and his sister had reached the halfway stage of their nature project. On Wednesday they walked to the midpoint of a local trail, where a narrow creek crossed the path. By midday, the sun was high and the air felt warm, even though it was not yet midsummer. They stopped beside the creek and watched a dragonfly pause in midair before darting away. A fallen branch rested midstream, splitting the water around it. Leo marked the trail's midpoint on his map and wrote notes about everything they observed. Later that evening, they compared their photographs and planned the second half of the project. They joked that they would still be working at midnight if they tried to finish every page at once. Seeing the repeated mid- words helped Leo notice that the prefix often points to the middle of a time, place or position.

Highlight the mid- words. Decide what is in the middle in each word - a time, place or position.
